4. Principles of recognition of receivables

Trade receivables and other receivables are presented at their carrying amounts less any allowance for doubtful debts.

An allowance for doubtful debts is made for receivables that are overdue by six months or more, or for receivables that are not yet due but are assessed as having a risk of non-recovery. Increases or decreases in the allowance for doubtful debts are recognized in administrative expenses in the consolidated income statement for the year.

5. Principles of recognition of inventories

Recognition principle: Inventories are stated at the lower of cost and net realizable value. Cost of inventories includes direct materials, direct labor, and manufacturing overhead incurred in bringing inventories to their present location and condition. Net realizable value is determined as the estimated selling price in the ordinary course of business less the estimated costs of completion and the estimated costs necessary to make the sale, including selling and distribution expenses.
Measurement method: Weighted average method
Recording method: Perpetual inventory system.
Method of allowance: An allowance is made for the portion of inventories where cost exceeds net realizable value, such as obsolete, slow-moving, or damaged goods. The allowance is determined based on the difference between cost and net realizable value at the reporting date. Increases or decreases in the allowance are recognized in cost of goods sold for the year.

6. Principles of recognition of fixed assets

Recognition principles for fixed assets (tangible, intangible and finance leases):

Fixed assets are presented at cost less accumulated depreciation. In the consolidated balance sheet, fixed assets are reflected under three items: cost, accumulated depreciation, and net book value. The initial cost of a fixed asset includes its purchase price and all other directly attributable costs necessary to bring the asset to the location and condition required for it to operate as intended. For self-constructed or self-produced fixed assets, cost is determined based on construction or production costs, including costs incurred up to the time the asset is ready for use. Depreciation method for fixed assets (tangible, intangible and finance leases): Depreciation is calculated using the straight-line method.

Depreciation method for fixed assets (tangible, intangible and finance leases): Depreciation is calculated using the straight-line method.

7. Recognition and depreciation principles for biological assets

a. Livestock for single-harvest products; seasonal crops or plants for single harvest
Recognition principles:

Livestock for single-harvest products and seasonal crops or plants for single harvest are measured at the lower of cost and net realizable value. The cost of these biological assets includes all costs of acquisition, care, and husbandry, as well as other costs directly attributable to bringing the assets to their present condition.
b. Livestock for recurring products at the mature stage:
Recognition principles:

Depreciation method: Depreciation of livestock for recurring products at the mature stage is calculated using the straight-line method.

c. Livestock for recurring products not yet at the mature stage

Recognition principles:

Livestock for recurring products not yet at the mature stage are measured at the lower of cost and net realizable value. The cost of newly generated biological assets includes husbandry and care costs incurred during the period, as well as depreciation of the parent biological assets attributable to the new biological assets.

d. Livestock for single-harvest products; seasonal crops or plants for single harvest

Recognition principles:

Livestock for single-harvest products and seasonal crops or plants for single harvest are measured at the lower of cost and net realizable value. The cost of these biological assets includes all costs of acquisition, care, husbandry, and other costs directly attributable to bringing the assets to their present condition.

8. Recognition and depreciation principles for investment property

Recognition principles: Investment property is recognized at cost less accumulated depreciation. The initial cost of investment property includes the purchase price and all directly attributable costs necessary to bring the asset to the condition required for its intended use.

Depreciation method: Investment property is depreciated using the straight-line method. Land use rights with an indefinite term are not depreciated.

9. Principles of financial investments

Subsidiaries:Subsidiaries are entities controlled by the Group. The financial statements of subsidiaries are included in the consolidated financial statements from the date control commences until the date control ceases.

Investments in associates:Investments in associates are accounted for using the equity method. They are initially recognized at cost in the consolidated balance sheet and subsequently adjusted for the Group's share of post-acquisition changes in the net assets of the associates.

10. Recognition and capitalization of borrowing costs

Borrowing costs are recognized as an expense in the period in which they are incurred, except for borrowing costs directly attributable to the acquisition, construction, or production of qualifying assets, which are capitalized in accordance with Vietnamese Accounting Standard No. 16. Borrowing costs directly related to the acquisition, construction, or production of qualifying assets—being assets that necessarily take a substantial period of time to get ready for their intended use or sale—are capitalized as part of the cost of those assets until they are ready for use or sale. Income arising from the temporary investment of specific borrowings is deducted from the borrowing costs eligible for capitalization. For general borrowings used for the construction of fixed assets or investment property, borrowing costs are capitalized even if the construction period is less than 12 months

11. Accounting principles for prepaid expenses and goodwill

Prepaid expenses:
Prepaid expenses include both short-term and long-term prepaid expenses presented in the balance sheet and are allocated over the prepaid period in line with the economic benefits expected to be derived from such expenses.

Recognition and subsequent measurement of goodwill:
Goodwill arising from business combinations is initially recognized at cost, representing the excess of the consideration transferred over the Group's share of the fair value of the identifiable net assets of the acquiree (subsidiaries, associates, or jointly controlled entities) at the acquisition date. After initial recognition, goodwill is measured at cost less accumulated amortization.

Goodwill is amortized on a straight-line basis over its estimated useful life, which does not exceed 10 years.

Upon disposal of a subsidiary, associate, or jointly controlled entity, the remaining unamortized balance of goodwill is recognized in profit or loss as part of the gain or loss on disposal.

12. Principles of recognition of provision

A provision is recognized when, as a result of a past event, the Company has a present legal or constructive obligation that can be reliably estimated and is likely to result in an outflow of economic benefits in the future to settle the obligation. Provisions are measured as the present value of the expected future cash outflows required to settle the obligation, using a pre-tax discount rate that reflects current market assessments of the time value of money and the specific risks of the liability.

13. Principles of recognition for owner's equity

Recognition of contributed capital, share premium and other components of equity:

Contributed capital, share premium, and other components of equity are recognized based on the actual capital contributions made by the owners.

Recognition of retained earnings:

Retained earnings represent the Company's accumulated profit after tax, as presented in the balance sheet, after deducting corporate income tax expenses

14. Principles and methods for revenue and other income recognition

Revenue from sales of goods: Revenue from the sale of goods is recognised in the consolidated statement of income when the significant risks and rewards of ownership have been transferred to the buyer. No revenue is recognised if there are significant uncertainties regarding recovery of the consideration due or the possible return of goods. Revenue on sales of goods is recognised at the net amount after deducting sales discounts stated on the invoice.

Revenue from provision of services: Revenue from services rendered is recognised in the consolidated statement of income in proportion to the stage of completion of the transaction at the balance sheet date.
